Global airlines race to fix A320 jets after Airbus recall

Airbus CEO apologises to airlines, passengers

REUTERS
Paris, November 29

GLOBAL AIRLINES SCRAMBLED on Saturday to fix a software glitch on their Airbus A320 jets as a recall by the European planemaker temporarily grounded aircraft in Asia and Europe and threatened travel in the United States during the busiest weekend of the year. Airbus CEO Guillaume Faury apologised to airlines and passengers after the surprise recall of 6,000 planes or more than half of the global A320-family fleet, which recently overtook the Boeing 737 as the industry's most-delivered model. "I want to sincerely apologise to our airline customers and passengers who are impacted now," Faury posted on LinkedIn. Friday's alert followed an unintended loss of altitude on an October 30 JetBlue flight from Cancun, Mexico, to Newark, New Jersey, which injured 10 passengers, according to France's BEA accident agency, which is probing the incident.

Airlines worked through the night to make fixes after Airbus issued the emergency recall to 350 operators around the world, and global regulators directed carriers to remedy the software problem before resuming flights. That appeared to help head off the worst-case scenario and capped the number of flight delays in Asia and Europe early on Saturday. The US will face high travel demand later in the day after the Thanksgiving holiday period. "It's not as chaotic as some people might think," said Asia-based independent aviation analyst Brendan Sobie,

THE IMPACT

■ Airbus recalls a total of 6,000 A320-family jets

■ Regulators worldwide order software fixes

■ JetBlue incident exposed vulnerability in flight-control software

■ JetBlue incident occurred on October 30, injuring 10 passengers

The departures' display board shows All Nippon Airways' multiple flight cancellations at Haneda airport in Tokyo Saturday

adding that airlines were always prepared for various potential disruptions. "But it does create some short-term headaches for operations," Airbus is also now telling airlines that emergency repairs to some of the A320 jets affected may be less burdensome than first thought, industry sources said, with fewer than feared likely to need hardware changes rather than the software fix. Even so, industry executives said the abrupt action was a rare and potentially costly headache at a time when maintenance is under pressure worldwide from labour and parts shortages.

Globally, there are about 11,300 of the single-aisle jets in service, including 6,440 of the core A320 model. The fix mainly involves reverting to earlier software, and although relatively simple, it must be completed before the planes can fly again. European low-budget airline Wizz Air said early on Saturday that software updates had been implemented overnight on all its affected A320-family jets with no further disruption expected. Flight tracker data from Cirium and FlightAware showed most global airports operating with good-to-moderate levels of delays. AirAsia, one of the world's largest A320 customers, said that it aimed to complete fixes in 48 hours, with engineering teams "working around the clock".

Taiwan's Civil Aviation Administration instructed airlines to conduct inspections and maintenance. It estimates that around two-thirds of the 67 A320 and A321 aircraft operated by the island's carriers are affected. The Civil Aviation Authority of Macao said it had asked Air Macau to address the issue, including rescheduling flights to minimise any disruption to passengers. ANA Holdings, Japan's biggest airline, cancelled 95 flights on Saturday affecting 13,500 travellers. ANA and its affiliates, such as Peach Aviation, operate the most Airbus A320 jets in Japan. Its chief rival, Japan Airlines, has a mostly Boeing fleet and does not fly the A320. Industry sources said a sharp loss of altitude on a Jet-

Blue flight on October 30 from Cancun, Mexico, to Newark, New Jersey, that injured several passengers had triggered the Airbus recall. Jetstar, the budget carrier of Australia's flag carrier Qantas, said some of its flights would be affected. South Korea's Asiana Airlines said it does not expect any significant disruptions to its flight schedule. Its domestic rival, Korean Air, said it was working to get 10 of its jets back into service. South Korea's transport ministry said upgrades to 42 aircraft there were expected to be completed by Sunday morning. Hong Kong budget carrier HK Express said it had upgraded more than half of its affected aircraft and that flight operations were normal. The world's largest A320 operator, American Airlines, said 209 of its 480 A320 aircraft needed the fix, revised down from an earlier estimate, most of which it expected to complete by Saturday. Other US carriers Delta Air Lines, JetBlue and United Airlines are also among the world's 10 biggest A320-family operators.

Adobe: US Black Friday online sales hit record $11.8 billion

REUTERS
November 29

AMERICAN SHOPPERS SPENT a record $11.8 billion online on Black Friday, up 9.1% from last year, final data from Adobe Analytics showed. Adobe Analytics, which tracks over 1 trillion US retail site visits, expects shoppers to spend $5.5 billion on Saturday and $5.9 billion on Sunday, up 3.8% and 5.4% from a year earlier respectively.

Separately, software firm Salesforce reported that American consumers had spent $18 billion on Black Friday purchases, up 3% from a year ago, with luxury apparel and accessories among the most popular categories. Although US consumers spent more this Black Friday compared to last year, price increases hampered online demand, according to Salesforce, with shoppers purchasing fewer items at checkout compared to last year.

Cyclone Ditwah: Death toll in Sri Lanka crosses 150

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Colombo, November 29

SRI LANKAN PRESIDENT Anura Kumara Dissanayake has declared a state of emergency throughout the island in view of the emergency situation that has emerged following the devastation caused by a powerful cyclone even as India delivered more relief supplies to the island nation.

Under its Operation Sagar Bandhu, India on Saturday sent around 21 tonne of relief materials in two military transport aircraft, a day after delivering the first tranche of over six tonne of essential supplies. As flight services were severely disrupted, the Indian High Commission in Colombo announced that it is setting up an emergency helpline at the Bandaranaike international airport in the Sri Lankan capital city to help Indian citizens in need of support.

The High Commission of India is providing all required assistance including food and

The Indian Air Force airlifting 21 tonne of relief material along with over 80 NDRF personnel and 8 tonne of equipment to Colombo as part of 'Operation Sagar Bandhu' water to Indian passengers stranded at the airport, the mission said. According to an official gazette dated Friday and released on Saturday, the state of emergency has been declared throughout the island.

At an all-party meeting, the opposition leaders called for the state of emergency to be declared. The doctors' trade union in a letter addressed to Dissanayake underscored the need to impose a state of emergency. The regulations are expected to expedite the process of relief coordination and rescue operations. Cyclone Ditwah on Saturday exited Sri Lanka that left more than 150 dead, amid a trail of destruction and damage to infrastructure, meteorological officials said.

China's central bank vows crackdown on virtual currency, flags Stablecoin concerns

REUTERS
Beijing, November 29

CHINA'S CENTRAL BANK reaffirmed its tough stance on virtual currencies on Saturday, warning of a resurgence in speculation and vowing to crack down on illegal activities involving Stablecoins.

The People's Bank of China (PBOC) said at a coordinating meeting on virtual currency regulation on Friday that crypto speculation has recently increased due to various factors, presenting new challenges for risk control,

The bank warned that Stablecoins risk being used for illegal activities including money laundering and fraud according to a statement released by the central bank. "Virtual currencies do not hold the same legal status as fiat currency and cannot be used as legal tender in the market," the PBOC said in a statement, adding that virtual currency-related business activities are "illegal financial activities." The central bank specifically highlighted concerns about Stablecoins, saying they fail to meet requirements for customer identification and anti-money-laundering controls. It warned that stablecoins risk being used for illegal activities including money laundering, fraud, and unauthorised cross-border fund transfers.

The central bank said it will "intensify efforts to combat related illegal financial activities" and "to maintain economic and financial stability." In October, PBOC Governor Pan Gongsheng said the central bank would continue to crack down on the operation and speculation of domestic virtual currencies, and at the same time closely track and dynamically evaluate the development of overseas Stablecoins. Hong Kong, which has established a regulatory regime for Stablecoins, has not yet awarded any licences to issuers. In China, cryptocurrency trading has been banned since 2021. Bitcoin mining is quietly staging a comeback in China despite being banned four years ago, as individual and corporate miners exploit cheap electricity and a data centre boom in some energy-rich provinces, according to miners and industry data.
